Police Civilian Employee of the Year

The Bartlett Police Department proudly recognizes Susan Angelacos as the Civilian Employee of Year for 2008.

Susan has been a member of the police department for 11 years. She is assigned to the records division. Susan had been nominated by her peers for her superior work in 2008. She had served as a backup supervisor throughout the year.

Susan is a vital member of the record's division as well as the entire police department. The record's division has a considerable amount of work that needs to be done on a daily basis. Supervisors and peers have complimented Susan on her superior customer service skills. She was responsible for training other records clerks and always demonstrated a professional demeanor to the public and fellow employees.

She is also very active in all of the department events. She attends and help organizes the annual department open house, the National Night Out, the charity basketball games, and the Special Olympics car wash.

Susan started with the Bartlett Police Department in 1998.
